Worcester Academy Bulletin

VOL. VIII DECEMBER, 1918 NO. 1

EDITORIAL

This issue of the BULLETIN is emphatically a war number. The material at hand concerning alumni in military service has accumulated to such an extent that, in its unquestionable claim to priority, it has compelled the omission of much other matter that properly has sought a place. Among this is further historical matter on the school; the first of a series of sketches on former teachers; letters from boys overseas; alumni notes, not military; and facts in the current life of the school. These must be relegated to the next issue, which will follow close on the heels of this, by the end of April at the latest.

Since the last issue of the BULLETIN was sent out in September the apparent end of the war has come, and the Worcester Academy world, in common with everything about it, is beginning to readjust itself to the new conditions. We have felt, and felt keenly, the effects of the giant struggle, and yet we, like our sister academies, have been less perturbed than colleges and many other institutions. As the large majority of our pupils, actual and prospective, were below the age accepted for military service, and as the sending of boys to private schools was favored by general financial prosperity, our registration has been but moderately affected. While great losses and serious inconveniences have been suffered by the withdrawal of teachers to enter service, yet on the whole we have fared better in this respect than many similar schools. Our schedules of study have gone on about the same, certain changes in view the early part of the present fall to meet the needs of older boys preparing for mid-year entrance to S. A. T. C. and for specialized forms of service having been forestalled by the armistice before they were really formulated. Military drill has shared with regular physical work the time and energy of the school body. Interschool athletic schedules have indeed been thrown into confusion, particularly in track, where most of the great meets in which we have long been associated prominently have been temporarily discontinued. But the bursting energies of schoolboy life have found abundant opportunity for outlet; the days on the campus have teemed with activities. More than all, a deeper sense of the real meanings of life and of personal and civic responsibility has been engendered by the stirring events that have crowded upon each other, driven home by earnest and well-measured words of interpretation and comment from chapel desk and teachers' chair. And now, with hardly a moment in which to scan the disturbed horizons, the school, with satisfaction in its past, with determination for the present, and with faith in the future, seeks to enlist itself in the ranks of the battalions that are to save the country to the cherished ideals of its founders.

Few features of the fall have touched the hearts of the boys more closely than the casual visits of old fellows fresh from service, bringing their personal word of experience, and showing that the stars on the service flags floating in The Megaron stand each for a W. A. boy. Perhaps surpassing these in dramatic appeal has been the standing at attention in chapel as a silent tribute to the memory of an old boy of the school whose death in service has just been announced. Happily these occasions are becoming less frequent, but, counting from the very beginning of the war, the number has increased to twenty-seven. This is out of a total in service of some 700, a very large percentage of fatalities it seems. Very likely the proportion would be decreased if full data at hand allowed the inclusion of every name that belongs in the grand total of those in service. Figures are not available from which to compute the proportion of the alumni who have taken part in the war, but it is probable that nearly one-half of all former students for the past twenty years, whether married or single, whether their stay at the school was short or long, have been enrolled; certainly more than one-third. This is a good record. It is a record, especially when we consider the large number who have proved themselves competent to lead, that justifies the existence of the private school of America. It is a record that will long adorn the history of Worcester Academy.

The Roll of Honor, on page 20, enshrines the twenty-seven whose fate it has been to make the supreme sacrifice. The list runs from Michelson of '97, leaving his consulate to become the first victim while inspecting the England prison camps in Germany, to Vincent Marshall, carrying to his western home his diploma last June, and to young Clifford Park, leaving his class to play a man's part. In it the graduate and non-graduate stand in equal honor. They who won laurels in scholarship and they who gained recognition in athletics devoted alike their talents. The school leaders, the monitors, appear in Carl Dudley and Elston Day.

Dexter Hall and the Dormer floor are both there. Charlie Bull and Clifford Stevens were ours for the full four years. There are the commissioned officer and the private; those who were stricken by disease amid the drudgery of the training camp, and those who received the stamp of glory on the front line and in No Man's Land; those who rest in the familiar and peaceful cemetery at home, and those who lie beneath the crosses of Flanders and Champagne. Most belonged still to the home circle of their parents; but some leave in loneliness the young wife and the bride, and the children who can hardly carry on in their memories the father who has gone. All belong to their country; all belong to a world made better by their work; and all belong to us. Their courage and their sacrifice will never be forgotten. It remains however for the school and their fellows to provide some proper and enduring memorial that the individual names of this Roll may forever be held in honor and in hallowed memory among us.

It seems invidious to select for special mention any from the long list of those who return. There are those among them who, like Luke Doyle, '06, and Walter Wheeler, '14, have won the coveted distinction of the Croix de Guerre. There are others who have been cited for distinguished bravery, either individually or with their unit. Others will be envied in that Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel, and the Argonne, names that have become common in the correspondence of the BULLETIN, will be to them familiar places. But all, whether they found their place in field, in camp, or in laboratory, whether they labored by land, by sea, or in air, gave all that they had, and nothing more can be asked.

Still there are a few from the earlier classes, men for the most part outside the pale of required service, who were peculiarly fitted for certain lines of work, and whom fortunately the emergency found. The class of '87, famous already in many ways, gave Dr. Edwin G. Dexter, a leader in Red Cross work in France, and now in charge of the Society's expedition to Montenegro. Pres. John Hope, '90, supervisor in Y. M. C. A. work among the colored troops in France, and referee in many complicated problems that concern the negroes; Hubert M. Sedgwick, '90, a Secretary of the Athletic Division of the Navy Training Camp Commission; Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, of the Princeton College Gymnasium, who has served on the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities; Edwin P. Grosvenor, '93, leaving a large law practice in New York City to join the Intelligence Division in Washington; Pres. Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth, serving as special Assistant Secretary of War, and there handling most important and difficult work in such a way as to be characterized by Sec. Baker as "qualified almost without equal;" these and scores of others constitute a body of men of which any school may well feel proud.

On its side what has the school done for its sons in service? How did it show them that it was behind them with all its mind and strength; that it did not forget them? The reply that can be made seems regretfully unsatisfactory; the items below almost too meager and inadequate to enumerate.

It has been a pleasure to forward the honorable records made here by candidates for training camps and preferred lines of service. We suspect a considerable total of cheery letters have been sent out by Dr. Abercrombie, Mr. Holmes, and others of the faculty. May we say here that the BULLETIN on its part regrets that it has been an impossibility to send a reply to many a word of greeting or of information that should have received one. The thought and effort of the Thimble Club, made up of the ladies of the Faculty, to send a box last spring to all W. A. boys in France, was thwarted by the prohibition of the postal authorities just as the things were being packed, to the great chagrin of the club. The BULLETIN has spent much effort in collecting and publishing war news, and we have reason to feel that these have been of considerable interest, as numerous words of appreciation have come to us, many from overseas. The school has daily spoken the message the soldier would send to his younger brothers in school by the great service flag on the campus, by the class banners of red and gold in The Megaron, and by the prevailing topics of conversation. Yet all these count but little. Still they are the bits that opportunity placed before us, leaving us compelled to find solace in the hope that the lessons taught in past years to the old boys have been real factors in equipping them for the great task they have just accomplished so splendidly. Perhaps the near future will find place for a memorial service, for a great reunion of Academy men who have been in the war, and for a special war service number of the BULLETIN, as well as provide some enduring memorial as suggested above. Any suggestions as to the financing of this memorial number, which should be worthy and complete, will be gratefully received by the BULLETIN.

This issue of the BULLETIN properly begins with the photograph of Mr. Holmes on the frontispiece. Mr. Holmes' connection with the school begins in a most interesting way even before he came to the Academy as an instructor. In the days when the school was located at Lincoln

Square, during the principalship of Dr. W. C. Poland, the parents of Mr. Holmes' mother, Mr. and Mrs. Howe of Worcester, rented from Doctor Poland a portion of the Academy building that was not then needed by the school, and used it as their residence. Mr. Holmes' mother herself, who had previously attended the Oread Institute, became a pupil at the Academy, and also had charge of some of the younger pupils. Doctor Poland moreover boarded for a time with Mr. Howe.

Mrs. Holmes, too, has a sort of indirect connection with the earlier school, in that Judge John D. Smith, the fifteenth principal of the Academy, had Mrs. Holmes' father, Enoch C. Adams, as his pupil in Litchfield, Me.

There has been no disturbing jolt in passing from the old year to the new, from the former administration to the present. Any such questionable move was not to be expected when it was remembered that the principal's chair was to be filled by one who had acquired his experience as a teacher mainly under Doctor Abercrombie, and who had felt the strength of the principles under the working of which the school had attained vitality and power. But Mr. Holmes had also caught his predecessor's zeal for advance and of course the fall was bound to show some evidences of this. And so, whatever greater modifications of school policy the trustees and the administration may jointly have in contemplation, they await the ripeness of time, and the transition is being made easily and smoothly.

Several little changes that the familiar eye would note are mentioned in Topics of the Term. Were anything to be singled out for special mention here, it perhaps might be the reorganization of the executive work. The duties that fell to Mr. Towle have been redistributed. Matters of permissions and business details are performed by Mr. Dodd, who has given up his teaching, and who is called Executive Officer. The discipline the principal shares with Mr. Beazley. Mr. George D. Church returns to the Academy from his Abbott School to take charge of the enrollment of new pupils, having the title of Registrar. The headship of the Dining Room is shared by two or three men in alternation. To accomodate these officers, and to afford better facilities for the faculty, the recitation room to the right of the south entrance of Walker Hall has been utilized, and the old offices have been further subdivided. In a way these offices, with their neat signs directing boys and strangers, are concrete indications of a purpose to make the school more efficient in doing its work, and so may fairly be considered emblematic of the purpose and hope of the school. In this purpose are co-operating trustees, faculty, and boys, and we dare say, the alumni body also, and so all may share alike in the bright promise of the future.

On September 18 the eighty-fifth year of the Academy opened. In June the trustees had announced a necessary increase in rate. The summer months had been days of anxiety and uncertainty for the nation, for the home, and for the school. And yet opening day found every room in Dexter and Davis occupied. This was true, even though a large group of boys of eighteen and nineteen had been called to service. This condition was indeed rewarding to Mr. Holmes, as he looked forward to his first year of administration.

Early in the fall term a census of the school was taken at the request of the registrar. Our readers, the majority of whom are old boys of the Academy, will be gratified to know a fact that this showed. Forty-five of the pupils acknowledged that their decision to attend Worcester was the result of a conversation by them or by their parents with some old Academy boy. The names of these former students who have so effectively served their school will be printed in the alumni columns.

Another noteworthy fact is that the registration for the winter term this year equals if not exceeds that of the fall term, over twenty new pupils having been enrolled to take the place of those removed. A few of these were returning students who had withdrawn in September to enter in S. A. T. C. Among the new entries are several due to the efficient and aggressive efforts of the new registrar, Mr. Church.

The new term has of course brought its peculiar problems and anxieties. It had been impossible to fill an important vacancy in the faculty, caused by the operation of the draft, when school opened, and not until the term was well under way was a competent man secured. The epidemic of influenza began its inroads in September, and invaded the ranks of the pupils and faculty alike. Rigorous measures were at once adopted, but at one time between thirty and forty boys were ill with the disease or showed suspicious symptoms. The accomodations of the Infirmary were supplemented by the upper floor of Walker Hall, no longer used as a dormitory, extra nurses were secured, and a moderate quarantine enforced. This vigorous treatment soon brought the epidemic under control, and only one death resulted, that of Frank C. Hanson, of Hartford, Conn., a member of the second-year class. It was inevitable that the regular work of the school should be retarded by this sickness. The good sense of the student body in preserving its poise and coolness was a helpful factor in the situation. The athletic activities of the fall were greatly hampered during the epidemic, but they resumed later a semblance of their normal character.

The question as to the provision which the school should make for military drill became an issue during the correspondence with parents in the summer. It was impossible to learn just what the Government wanted. At one time it seemed that it might be the policy to organize companies of the S. A. T. C. in preparatory schools as well as in colleges, and the Academy held itself in readiness to do its part. All was in doubt when the term opened. Accordingly the scheme that had been in force during the spring term was followed in the main. The boys were given three hours of training each week under the direction of Major Warren of Worcester, and all were required to provide themselves a uniform. As the term advanced it became evident that branches of the S. A. T. C. would not be organized in secondary schools, but the War Department's attitude was favorable to the establishment of junior branches of the R. O. T. C. An inspector visited us, and we understand that he carried away favorable impressions of our adaptedness for this work. We decided finally, however, not to apply at present to be designated as the location of such a group.

In regard to the general problem it is felt that military training and regular routines of study do not go well side by side. The testimony of educational institutions the past fall has been practically unanimous to this effect. The position of the Academy then is one of waiting. The number of hours per week devoted to drill has been reduced to two, thus taking the place of only a part of the regular physical work. If the Government sees fit to ask secondary schools to co-operate with it in providing military training, the school stands ready to do so. If it does not make such a request, the school will be very content to continue its former system of physical work.

One feature of the work in seeking information concerning Academy boys in service has been getting in touch again with many old pupils from whom we had not heard in many years. Some weeks ago a number of letters were sent out to boys belonging to classes from about 1905 on who had not been on our alumni files, the only address available in many cases being the home address at the time of their attendance. Nearly two hundred responses to these letters have come, nearly all of them disclosing an additional Academy man in service. It is with satisfaction that the BULLETIN introduces these names once more to the Academy circles, and trusts that the acquaintanceship will prove lasting. The work of locating the old pupils is to be prosecuted vigorously this year, in the expectation of preparing a card catalogue of all former pupils which shall be reasonably complete.

The series of articles by Dr. Ward on the principals of the Academy having been completed, it now seems most appropriate to turn to the former members of the faculty who have been prominent in the life of the school. Accordingly we begin such a series of sketches in the next number with that of Mr. Shepardson, whose stay at the school from 1883 to 1896 covered a very important period in the development of the school, and whose character and attainment endeared him so greatly to the thirteen generations of boys who were under him. This sketch will be followed in successive issues by those of other old teachers, taking first naturally those of longest service in the school. We feel sure that our readers will be happy to meet in this way their old instructors and friends.

Several years ago it was the fortunate privilege of the BULLETIN to print an article interpretative of Japanese thought from the pen of Rev. Frank A. Lombard, '92, whose career in educational work in Japan has been so notable. Not only as Dean of the Doshisha College, an institution under American auspices at Kyoto, has he done much to make the Japanese youth acquainted with American ideas, but his service there was so conspicuous that he has for some time been called also by the Japanese authorities themselves to a professorship in English Literature in the Imperial University. He is now spending a Sabbatical year at home, and has had the kindness to prepare for us an article on "Japan and the World War." It is a word from a man who thoroughly understands the Japanese point of view.

The BULLETIN is happy to bring to its readers the desk calendar to be found inserted in this issue, which is furnished us by the school registrar, Mr. George D. Church. The "considerations" it contains are worthy of thought and of being passed along. Incidently it may be proper to express here the happiness brought by the many letters that have come to the school in pleasant acknowledgement of the greeting sent out at New Year's.

A Word from Mr. Holmes

"I found Rome a city of brick, I left it a city of marble." So spake Caesar Augustus, contemplating his labors. Over this hill-top where sits our school city thirty-six years have passed while the thought and toil and prayer of a great builder have wrought incessantly to people the school republic with the "breed of noble bloods" and to lift above it that clear, shining standard of honorable achievement which is the Worcester ideal. Turning from his long day's task to rest from his labors, Doctor Abercrombie can say in words sanctified by his accomplishments: "I was a builder; after me come others."

What is the call to us, the other builders, who take up his task and step with unaccustomed feet to the places of decision? First of all to keep forever clear in our vision the great watchword of the school, "Achieve the honorable." Not alone by the unwearying patience with which we sound those words in boyish ears, as the school upon the hill moves from day to day along its course, but also by the tribute with which we salute that greater company, the sons of the school outside, who, wherever men undertake great tasks, have become and are daily becoming the honorable achievers of their generation, must we cherish and exalt our glorious motto. It is for the Alumni standing shoulders together to present to a world searching for leadership the sight of men upright in private life, generous in public service, stalwart against the false philosophies that assault our institutions, broadminded and hopeful in the face of social and economic problems that multiply like the Hydra's heads. Let us have it said of Worcester men that there is a something, a sensitiveness to the call of duty, a rallying to good causes in distress, a refusal to honor aught but the honorable, an energy of righteousness that cheers the defenders of ordered civilization and dismays the legions of anarchy, a something born of the spirit, so bright, so unquenchable, so infectious that it characterizes us and our school and enlists men to labor by our side.

And then what of the school? What shall Worcester men do for her? Has she any needs? Do the passing years leave her unchanged? Not so. Needs she has in plenty: physical needs, enlargements and repairs, but most insistent of all a great spiritual need, which can be satisfied only with spiritual offerings. She needs the constant loyalty and the interest of all her sons. She needs this tribute of gratitude from Alumni bestowed by word, by letter, by visit, upon those who sit in her halls to teach and direct; she needs it manifested in the activity of old boys who shall direct an ever lengthening column of the best youth in America to her gates. Her continuing cry is for boys, boys, boys, the promising boys, the ambitious boys, the fine-spirited boys, the best boys of the land, a vast company of young manhood marching to her shrine, not to be sacrificed, but to be ennobled and enriched and sent out to the world to honor the old school and to bless mankind.

Let us all, then, reaching forth into a future enlarged by vision and faith established securely by loyal response to Worcester's call, make these words our own:—

"Still onward and upward pursue thy fair march,
Like an army with banners unfurled,
While God bends above thee his covenant arch
And before thee lies waiting the world."

JAPAN AND THE WORLD WAR

The Pacific Ocean is sure to become increasingly important in the history of the world; and it is necessary that we of the United States should come to understand more perfectly our neighbors in the Orient. In particular it is now necessary that we understand Japan's relation to the world war and her present attitude.

Among the various forms of Prussian propaganda in the United States and throughout the world none has been more insidious than that which cast suspicion upon Japan and filled our minds with doubt concerning her friendship and the part she was likely to play in any movement of the nations. This propaganda, taking advantage of certain well-known facts, and safely presuming upon our ignorance of vital elements in Japanese character, created such a feeling against Japan that Germany was confident of a clash upon the Pacific which would ultimately play into her hands and give her supremacy over the United States.

The world stage was set with a care that took account of everything except the spiritual elements of human nature; and Germany began the war.

Japan entered the war out of respect for a piece of paper: her treaty alliance with Great Britain. She had not the slightest personal cause for hostility. Germany at first regarded her attitude as merely formal, the result of compelling circumstances. She expected to find in Japan a friend, or at least one who, acting in accord with Prussian principles, could not be loyal in her alliance with Great Britain. In this, Germany believed her own propaganda.

Japan admired Germany and the German people, their efficiency and Kultur; Prussian influence was strong in the Japanese army and in all the many spheres of activity controlled by her men of university training; her government was largely bureaucratic; and her ambition for territorial expansion apparently natural. These were the facts upon which Germany based her propaganda and her faith. It was to be expected that Japan would find some way in which to break from her alliance and grasp the opportunity for her own advancement in the Pacific. This Germany expected; and even to us, unconsciously under the influence of her propaganda, Japan in democratic alliance appeared strangely incongruous, so that we hardly believed the sincerity of her position or had faith in her future loyalty.

Little by little the extent of German intrigue in arousing bad blood became apparent; and the crude suspicions vanished, leaving only a vague, questioning doubt which still lingers among us: an insidious danger to the very cause of international brotherhood for which we stand.

This lingering doubt is dispelled by any consideration of Japan which gives due importance to her sense of honor, her sagacity in political leadership, her growing democracy, and the spirit of devotion among her people, regardless of rank. In so brief an article it is obviously impossible to go into details; but it may safely be said that Japan has fully established her loyalty to the cause of the Allies in the present war, and fully satisfied our government of the honorable nature of her international dealings. This leaves us to consider the position in which Japan finds herself to-day, caught in the folds of an accellerated evolution.

The world war soon developed into a struggle between conflicting ideas and ideals. The return of peace, with victory for the allied armies, marks a great advance toward the firm establishment of those ideas and ideals which make for human brotherhood and the development of spiritual manhood; but the end is not yet. The struggle must go on. The ultimate victory can be obtained only progressively; not, we may reasonably hope, through further strife and bloodshed, but through the no less strenuous and severe endeavor of social evolution. Within the last five years a world has been born anew; the next twenty-five years, the years of its youth and adolescence, are sure to be filled with rapid changes. Many things which we shall regret are sure to occur; many mistakes are sure to be made; but of the character of the development no man can doubt.

Our eyes are upon Europe, and we watch with eager gaze the rapid, turbulent changes that make for democratization there; but the results of the war in Europe will be found insignificant in comparison with its results in Asia. The outcome of this struggle changes by two thousand years the course of Oriental evolution. A victory of brute force, of irresponsible self-will, would have compelled us of the United States to adopt a policy of self-defense deadening to our higher spiritual aspirations and our noblest national instinct. Much more would it of necessity have turned the development of the New Orient into channels of selfish materialism, and have put back by centuries the growth of its higher life. But Germany has been conquered. The ideals for which she stood have been found wanting; and the pathway of evolution now lies open for spiritual factors. The meek shall inherit the earth.

The subjects of evolutionary change, however, are often unconscious of that change, sometimes opposed to it; and Japan is largely unconscious of the great movement of which she has become a part. Her leaders, her scholars and her statesmen, are not unconscious. They are keenly awake to the present trend and aware of the inevitable outcome. Some heartily rejoice; others bitterly grieve; but none will for a moment seek to impede the movement whereby Japan keeps an honored place among the onward-marching nations of the world. The power to foresee the inevitable and the tact to retain the initiative in entering upon the inevitable are characteristics of Japanese statesmen. Thus a popular movement in Japan, after reaching a certain point, is sure to become a movement under the leadership of those in government authority, and to result in an evolutionary advance rather than a revolutionary overthrow. This fact, taken together with the fact that self-abnegation for the good of the country as a whole is the highest duty binding upon all Japanese alike, makes it certain that whether gladly or not the leaders of Japan will conduct their nation in harmony with the inevitable trend of modern evolution.

Nor is this democratization opposed to the instinct of the Japanese people. They are in many ways exceedingly democratic; and true democracy is not limited to any specific form of government. In the early years of Japan's modern life, she was an ardent admirer of the United States. During the years in which she found herself compelled to struggle for national standing, she became impressed with our apparent materialism and was led to question the sincerity of some of our more ideal utterances, especially in view of the fact that we persisted in an invidious racial discrimination in the laws governing the admission of foreigners to our shores. Economic pressure forced Japan to place great emphasis upon things material and to worship efficiency, though by nature she was idealistic and a worshipper of the heroic.

The last two years have brought to Japan a new revelation of the United States, even as they have brought such a revelation to ourselves. She is rapidly regaining her old faith in us as a people of just purpose and of spiritual ideals, among whom there is something more powerful than the almighty dollar. She is quick to estimate values, and she is learning the power of the spiritual, even in the modern world where selfish materialism had seemed to reign. Her future relations with the United States depend largely upon us. It is ours to be her trusting, trusted friend, co-operating in her hard task of the spiritual democratization of the Orient.

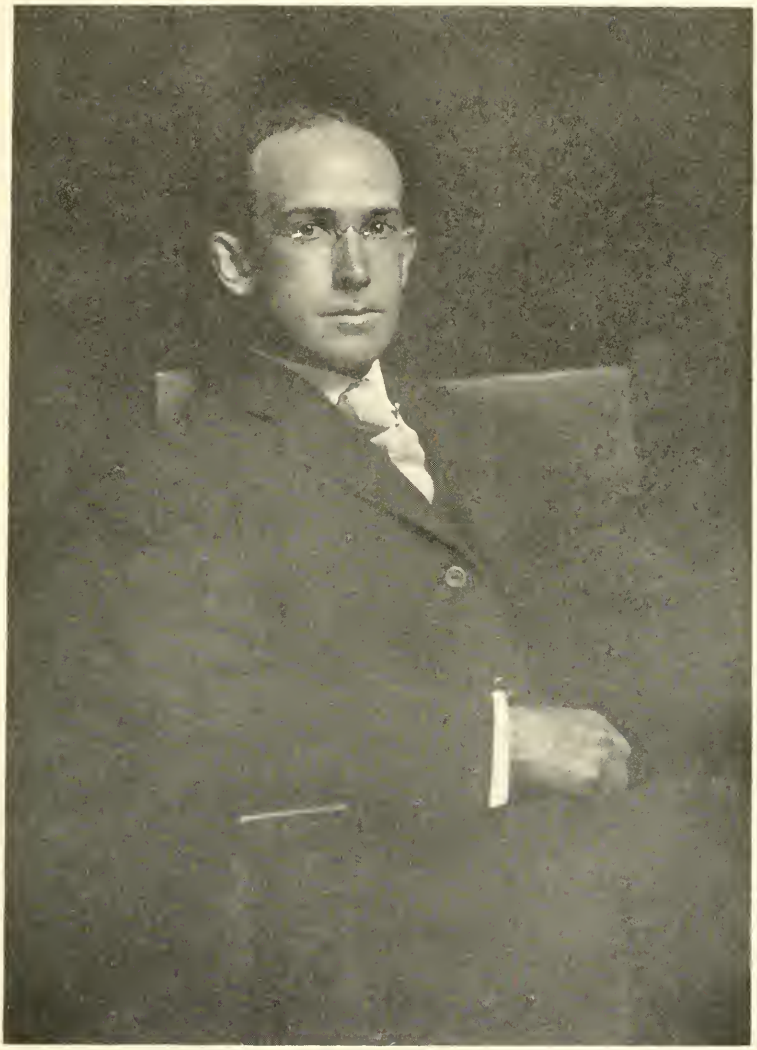
Frank A. Lombard, '92

CLIFTON A. TOWLE, 1903-1918

Mr. Towle resigned his position on the Academy faculty late in September to accept a call to the Reclamation Service of the U. S. Sanitary Corps. The position involved rank as First Lieutenant, but before all the details incident to the formal granting of the commission were completed, the armistice was signed. He continued the same line of work, however, as a civilian official, being appointed at once in the civil service a Curative Workshop Instructor of the Medical Department at Large of the Army, and stationed at the Walter Reed Hospital at Washington, D. C. At the first this work was combined with that of selecting men to engage in the mental and vocational training of wounded soldiers.

In regard to his Washington work he writes: "I am helping with the administrative end and the office work of our Division of Physical Reconstruction at the hospital. I am interviewing convalescent soldiers who enroll with us or who are sent by the surgeons, and assigning courses, etc. I get a chance to hear many an interesting tale, and to give many words of cheer. All are men who have lost an arm, leg, or worse. Some crippled for life, many down-hearted. A chance certainly for good works."

After several weeks in Washington he was transferred to U. S. Hospital No. 10 at Parker Hill, Boston, for similar service. His address is 104 Hemenway St., Boston. Very recently a lieutenant's commission has been finally granted him. Mrs. Towle and the two children, Alice and Harriet, six and three years old respectively, are making their home for the present with Mrs. Towle's parents at Laconia, N. H.



Clifton A. Towle, 1903-1918

Mr. Towle came to the school in the Fall of 1903, a few days after the opening of the school year, to fill a vacancy in the science department. He brought to his new position a rich experience. Born in the town of Winthrop, Me., and early resolving to secure a college education, he entered Oak Grove Seminary, Vassalboro, Me., a school under the control of the Society of Friends, and went from there to Haverford College. After completing the Freshman year there, he returned to his native state and entered the Sophomore class at Bowdoin. He remained here until his graduation three years later, being a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. He then taught for a year in the high school at Lexington, Mass., going thence to become the principal of the high school at Gorham, N. H. After a few years of work there, he decided to enter private school work, and came to the Academy, as stated above, in 1903.

His work comprised both science and French. He roomed at first in the South Wing, but soon was put in charge of the Main Building of Davis Hall. He was married in the summer of 1908 to Louise Stratton of Laconia, N. H., whom he had met while at Gorham, and for five years thereafter occupied the suite on the first floor of North Dexter. In 1913 he moved to the rooms on the first floor of the Main Building, which he occupied until the past summer, when it was arranged for him to live outside the school, and he had just settled in an attractive home on Germain Street when the call to the new work came.

Like all Academy teachers, he assumed a certain amount of administrative work from the start. His ability in this line was so evident, and his wisdom and tact in matters of discipline so marked, that various duties of this sort fell to him successively, and about seven years ago, when Dr. Abercrombie wished to delegate fully and definitely to another certain important administrative tasks, Mr. Towle was selected for these, and given the title of Assistant to the Principal. Last June, on the assumption by Mr. Holmes of the principalship, Mr. Towle was made Assistant Principal.

These positions brought him in charge of most of the disciplinary details of the school life, including in particular, permissions, absences, and tardiness, the assignment of rooms, church attendance, as well as the more serious matters of discipline. In all these vexing problems he won the full respect and co-operation of the boys, and they always recognized his sense of justice and his devotion to their true interest. A large part of the correspondence with parents came under his hand. He was each summer in direct charge of the admission of new pupils to the school. Throughout it all he retained his classes in botany and biology, and was much of the time the practical head of the department of science. He was from its organization an honorary member of Agora, and was always active in promoting its interests.

His connections outside the school were many. For several years, in association with Mr. MacMillan, then the head of the physical training at the Academy and now known internationally for his arctic explorations, he conducted a boys' summer camp at Bustin's Island in Casco Bay. He was fond of mountain climbing and was an active member of the Appalachian Club. He was a member of the Rotary Club and the Economic Club of Worcester, and a regular attendant of All Saints' Episcopal Church. Within the last year or two Dr. Abercrombie and Mr. Holmes had infected him with their enthusiam for golf, and he had to his credit many a good score on the links of the city. He has been a Mason since his days in Gorham.

At his last Chapel service the school and faculty presented him with a handsome Hamilton watch with a chain and Masonic charm, the words of presentation being spoken by George Johnson of the Senior class, for the boys, and Mr. Aldrich, for the faculty. The case of the watch was engraved with the monogram C. A. T., and on the inside were the words "Johnny" Towle, the name by which he was fondly known to the boys.

No one will regret his leaving the place he has so long filled more than the alumni, who to the number of hundreds have looked upon him as an honored and beloved part of their school. The returning boy always sought him out, and the letters to school seldom failed to include a kind remembrance for him. In his long career also he had formed deep friendships with many of his colleagues, bonds which will outlast the Academy days, and will remain strong and tender during the coming years. Dr. Abercrombie, in particular, found great comfort and satisfaction in the loyalty and efficiency of the man who stood so closely beside him in the stress and moil of conducting the multiple sides of the school life, and whose counsel he valued all the more, as he repeatedly said, because their temperaments were so different. Mr. Towle's going removes indeed a hand and a personality that the school could ill afford to lose, but it cannot take away the fifteen years of true and productive service that he had built into the very texture of Worcester Academy. This will remain until the last of the boys who knew him drops from the pages of the school's living alumni.

The Tablet in The Megaron
Placed by the Faculty of the Academy, November, 1918

Memorial Tablet to Dr. Abercrombie

There was placed in The Megaron the past fall the memorial tablet to Doctor Abercrombie which this cut represents. It was presented by the members of the faculty of last year. It is placed on the east wall of the alcove-platform, being thus one of the first objects to attract the attention as a person enters The Megaron from Walker Hall, perhaps the most common approach. The inscription is easily legible from the cut, and seeks to perpetuate in imperishable bronze the impression made by Doctor Abercrombie upon those men who worked most closely with him and who knew so well his ideals and ambitions for the school and for his boys.

Dr. Abercrombie in Leisure

During the summer Doctor and Mrs. Abercrombie settled themselves comfortably in the new home they had bought at 8 Trowbridge Road, Worcester. They were found there when the fall term of the Academy opened, and were happy in receiving the returning teachers and old boys, who would drop over now and then to see the "Doctor." After the school had been in session two or three weeks, Doctor Abercrombie came up one morning, leading the Chapel service and speaking a hearty word to the boys.

In October, accompanied by Mrs. Abercrombie, he closed his home for the winter and visited in New York, attending in the meantime his son Ralph's wedding which took place November 2. They then went to Haverford and remained until Christmas with his daughter Esther, whose husband, Dr. Dean B. Lockwood, has this year become head of the Latin department at Haverford College. While here, an urgent call came to him to act as treasurer of the funds of the Athletic Division of the Naval Recreation Work of the government. After some consideration he finally decided not to accept this offer, although this opportunity to take part in war-work was very tempting.

About January 1, Doctor and Mrs. Abercrombie went to Florida, where they purpose to remain through most, if not all, of the winter. Their address is the Pines, Daytona, Fla. They expect to return to their Worcester home in the spring.

For several weeks Doctor Abercrombie has been suffering from a general attack of rheumatism, which has particularly affected his right hand, necessitating its being kept in splints and making it very difficult for him to write. The last word from him states that some evidences of improvement can be seen. The boys and teachers of the Academy, who were in the school last year, sent Doctor Abercrombie at Christmas a set of the Odyssey with the Greek and the Latin translation on parallel pages, a gift which gave him great pleasure as an evidence that the old fellows did not forget him and that they were so mindful of his fondest tastes.

Later information in regard to himself and his plans comes in a letter dated Feb. 27:

"You will be glad to know that my hand is beginning to mend. The inflammation is reducing, and I haven't worn it in the splints for a week now after two and a half months 'close bounds.' I am still full of rheumatism, but inflammation has broken out only in the right hand. My knuckles on that hand hardly look like knuckles yet, and the fingers are stiffly inflexible. The weather here has been very unfavorable for the trouble during this month for it has been rainy, very damp with steaming heat, as it were.

"We leave here this coming Wednesday, March 5, for St. Augustine. The weather is growing too warm, and we feel it wise to start northward, and break the long journey by a stop here and there. We shall be in St. Augustine about a month, and may find a little suburban town near Charleston, S. C. where we shall stay a week or so. Then we go on to Haverford again for another visit with Esther and Dean, and later to New York to be with Dan and Ralph till summer. Both have been sick, Dan very sick, but both are better now."

Worcester Academy in the War

NOTE. Sketches of Michelson and Gaunt appeared in the BULLETIN of March, 1916; of Arnold and Starrett in December, 1917; of Knight, and some further facts in regard to Starrett, in March, 1918; of Stevens, Hobbs, and Zwinge in June, 1918.

We have further learned in regard to Webber, whose death was reported last June, that he was killed in an aeroplane accident at Fort Worth, Tex., April 1916, being attached at that time to squadron 84 of the U. S. Aviation Service, and being also a member of the British Royal Flying Corps. Reference to Buttfield, '06, is deferred to the next issue.

LIEUTENANT GEORGE L. HOWARD, '02

Lieut. George Leslie Howard died August 12, 1918 in Flanders, from wounds received in action three days before.

At the first threat of war in Mexico in 1916 he joined Company K, First New York Infantry, National Guard. It developed that his regiment was not needed on the border at that time. In the spring of 1917, shortly before the declaration of war, he was commissioned a lieutenant in the supply department of the first infantry and detached from his company. For a time he was stationed at Utica where he worked indefatigably to get the regiment equipped on a war basis. When the New York Guard was ordered into training at Spartanburg he was made a line officer and assigned to Company L, 105th Infantry, which was made up largely of veteran troops who had seen border service. He went to France with the 27th Division in May 1918, spent five weeks in an officers' training camp over there, then rejoined his company and moved to the front. He was promoted to first lieutenant July 1. A letter from him dated Aug. 1, about a week preceding his death, stated that his company expected any minute to be sent to the front firing line. News from the War Department reported first that he had been seriously wounded by a stray shell in action Aug. 9. The next evening another message to his father officially announced his death Aug. 12. He was buried at Esquelvecq, France.

He was born in Malone, N. Y., March 4, 1884, the son of George S. Howard. He was a member of the junior class at Worcester Academy during the year 1900-1901. He then took a year at Phillips Andover and entered Yale where he remained two years, and then cut short his studies to enter upon a business career. He entered the employ of Austin Nichols & Company, wholesale grocers of New York City, and remained with them two years. Later he traveled extensively through the West for the Dennison Co. His father in the meantime had become heavily interested in a wholesale grocery house at Malone, and the son came back home in 1907 to assume its management, in which work he was very successful.

He was very popular in his home town, and was particularly skillful in staging entertainments for charitable purposes. He was married May 5, 1917, securing leave of absence from duty at Peekskill, N. Y. for the wedding, to Ina Williams of Lancaster, Ontario, who survives him without children.

A memorial service at Malone was very largely attended, and showed the esteem in which he was held by his townsmen, many of whom had known him from boyhood. No cut of him is available.

SERGEANT RALPH L. COOK, '04

Ralph Louis Cook, Sergeant 1st Class, 26th Aero Squadron, died in France Oct. 20, 1918, after a short illness from appendicitis. He enlisted early in July, 1917, and for a short time was stationed at one of the aviation camps on Long Island. Previous to enlisting he had had considerable experience with the aeroplane, having made a number of flights with an instructor. He arrived in England in September 1917, and soon after went across to France where he remained until his death, being much of the time in Issodun.

He was born in Worcester about 1884, the son of Le Roy Cook. He was a student at the Academy from January 1899 to June 1901, entering with the preparatory class. Soon afterwards he removed to California. At the time of his enlistment he was living at White Plains, New York. He was married in 1914 to Mary Adella Moore, who survives him.

A letter sent from the Chaplain of his Corps says that he was buried the day after his death with military ceremonies and with the Masonic ritual in the American cemetery near the army post. He speaks of a touching little incident. Another soldier was being buried far from his command without escort, without flowers. Sergeant Cook's commander noted this, and from the wealth of flowers at his grave he ordered a choice piece placed on the stranger's grave, in the belief that he would want to share with his brother soldier. The chaplain was a professor at the Newton Theological Institution, a circumstance very gratifying to his family as, while in Worcester, Cook and his people attended the First Baptist Church. "Clean-cut, conscientious, high principled," "make it strong what a royal good sport he was, and how well liked," "one of the finest men in the organization of the post," were some of the comments made by his comrades.

LIEUTENANT LAWRENCE COWING, '06

Lieut. Lawrence Cowing died at Bordeaux, France, September 13, of a rare type of jaundice (Weil's disease), following influenza. His sister, in Red Cross Canteen work in France, was present at his funeral, but could not reach him before his death. He was ill only a week. He was attended in the hospital by Major Hugh Cabot of Boston.

He was born in 1886, the son of R. A. Cowing of Wyoming, O. He entered Worcester Academy in the fall of 1904 as a member of the junior class, and was here until June, 1906. He roomed in Dexter Hall, and was prominent in baseball and other athletics, holding the school championship in tennis. He was an uncle of C. Estes Wood, '09.

After leaving Worcester, he spent most of his time on the Pacific Coast. He was for a couple of years at Spokane, about three years at Portland, Ore., in the real estate business, and for the last two years at Los Angeles. He continued his fondness for sport, and had a host of real friends wherever he went. He was a member of the Los Angeles Country Club, and was amateur golf champion of California in 1916.

At the beginning of the war he enlisted a private in the 144th Field Artillery at Los Angeles. Was made a sergeant at once, and was appointed 2nd lieutenant in about six months. The regiment sailed across about the middle of last August, he being thus on the other side only about a month. He worked hard and had the respect of his fellow officers and the affection of his men. His colonel told his sister that he was the one man in the regiment who could not be replaced.

SERGEANT CARL B. KRUSE, '06

Sergt. Carl Ballauf Kruse died Oct. 18, 1918, of influenza in his home city, Cincinnati. He had been in war service since June. At the time war was declared he tried to get into special work but failed to pass the physical requirements. Last June, however, he was inducted into the motor train unit which had been established at the University of Cincinnati. After the first term he was asked to remain as an instructor and was soon made sergeant. He was about to be made top sergeant when he became ill.

He was stricken with the influenza while helping others during the worst stages of the epidemic in his city. At first he did not seem seriously sick, but after pneumonia developed he lasted only a short time. He was buried in military form, eight of his soldier friends acting as pall bearers.

He was born in 1887, the son of Charles Kruse of Cincinnati. In the fall of 1903 he entered the second-year class of the Academy,following his two older brothers,Robert L. Kruse, '99 and Edgar A. Kruse, '01. He remained here until the end of his junior year, rooming in Dexter Hall. For about five years after he left Worcester he was in the automobile business with his brother Edgar, after which he sold the Kelly-Springfield motor truck.

His brother Edgar writes of him: "Carl was 31 years old when he died and was the youngest boy in our family and the only child left at home. His parents naturally feel their loss greatly, but in view of the fact that he was doing his bit for his country they are bearing up well."

We regret that it has been impossible to get a portrait to accompany this sketch. No one of the fellows who knew him and loved him in Worcester needs a cut,however,to recall the features of their friend Carl, who gave his life for others in the emergency of the epidemic.

LIEUTENANT CARL A. DUDLEY, '07

Lieut. Carl Abell Dudley was killed in action upon the western front in France, Sept. 15, 1918, while serving as an officer in C Company, 306th Machine Gun Battalion, U. S. A. The following sketch and personal tribute was written by Lieut. Harry L. Wiggin, who himself is just home from France, and who by virtue of their class comradeship and their close work together in the Legomathenian Society doubtless knew Carl more intimately at the Academy than any other member of the school.

"Lieutenant Dudley was born in Keene, N. H. on February 27, 1889. He was the son of Darwin E. Dudley, who was a well known Boston insurance man. Carl spent his boyhood days in Keene and entered Worcester Academy in the Fall of 1903 as a member of the class of 1906. After a year and a half with the '06 class, he dropped back to the class of 1907. During his school career he was one of the most popular members, not only of his class but of the school. His motto used to be "school first, then the Class." There was no task too great for him nor was there any to which he refused to give his best. A brief list of his various activities will show the faith and trust that the school and his classmates had in him. In the Fall of 1906 he played guard on the Varsity; was a most influential man on the Board of Monitors; was an editor on the Academy Weekly board, and it was chiefly through his efforts that the school paper was changed to the name of Vigornia, he being its first editor-in-chief; he was class orator his senior year and his oration on Class Day was very highly spoken of; in class athletics he was a very prominent member on the football, basketball, and gym teams, being on three of the class championship teams; as a member of the Legomathenian Society he was a debater of the keenest type, being a member of the debating team two years, at one time its president, and for eight terms on its executive committee.

"After graduating from Worcester he entered Harvard, but on account of his father's death in June 1908 left college and entered the employ of the Boston Transcript. He was a member of the city staff, and his duty was to "cover" police headquarters. From the Transcript he went into the employ of Walter Baker & Co., Ltd., in that company's advertising department. After several years there, he went to New York, to become associated with the Three Examiners in the advertising department.

"In December 1917 he was called by the draft into the service, and was sent to Camp

Upton, N. Y. He was assigned to the 152nd Depot Brigade, but was shortly transferred to a machine gun company. When the call sounded for the Third Officers' Training Camp, he was among the first selected from the enlisted personnel, and on January 5 started in his three months' intensive training. At the completion of his course he came out a "candidate officer" and was assigned to the 305th Machine Gun Battalion, which left for France in the early spring. Near the end of the summer he received his commission, and was assigned to the 306th Machine Gun Battalion, serving with C Company at the time of his death.

"To those who knew Carl, especially the members of his class, this news will be received with great sorrow. He will be greatly missed at all the school gatherings. We are proud of him, proud to have known him and to have been associated with him. He gave his life willingly, in the service of his country, that democracy might triumph over autocracy."

He is survived by his stepmother, Mrs. L. F. Wheeler of 52 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, Mass. He had no brothers nor sisters.

On the day that his death was announced to the Academy boys in the chapel and the school stood at attention in his honor, Paul Hultman, also of '06, happened to be present. He arose and spoke most feelingly of his old schoolmate, emphasizing the manner in which he always stood for that which is right and clean and honorable, and how he had led the school toward the best things.

LIEUTENANT CHARLES R. BULL, '09

Lieut. Charles Roy Bull died in Camp Lee, Va. Oct. 11, 1918, from pneumonia. His military service began in April 1917, when he joined the training school at Plattsburg. After three months he received his honorable discharge, and in the early fall took a position with the War Risk Insurance Dept., U. S. Treasury, Washington. He filled this position, which was important government service, until April, 1918. In that month he went to Camp Upton, L. I., became a sergeant, and in July was sent to the Officers' Training School at Camp Lee, Va. Here he received his commission as 2nd Lieutenant almost simultaneously with his death, which occurred during the epidemic which raged in that camp during October.

He was born in 1891, the son of George W. Bull. He came to the Academy in the fall of 1905, his home at that time being Monticello, Maine. He entered the first year class, and, completing the regular course of four years, was graduated in 1909. He was a member of Sigma Zeta Kappa, and became prominent in many of the activities of the school. His younger brother, Frank A., came with him to the Academy in 1906.

Charles entered Bowdoin and was graduated there in the class of 1914, being a member of Alpha Delta Phi. He then entered the George Washington Law School at Washington, D. C., graduating in 1916. During his studies here he for a time was in the law division of the Library of Congress. He at once accepted a position in the law office of Harrington, Bingham & Englar, 64 Wall St., New York City, passing the New York bar examination that fall,and remained with this firm until he went to Plattsburg just after the United States entered the war.

His career in Bowdoin, in his legal studies, and in his government service uniformly bears testimony to his splendid qualities and mental gifts. A close friend speaks of his life, which unfortunately came to its end so soon, as a fine, clear continuation of the qualities and possibilities he showed at Worcester. He came to the Academy a young boy and grew into youth while here. Everybody was fond of him, and recognized his powers and his charm as a friend. His long stay in the school and his close connection with its varied interests mark him as one of the most thoroughly Worcester boys of those the Academy has given to the country in this war.

PAYMASTER GEORGE A. HUNT, '09

George Allen Hunt was killed at Philadelphia about February 1, by falling into the hold of a vessel while superintending the loading of supplies. He joined the Navy shortly after the war was declared, and at his death held the grade of Paymaster. He had formerly been a member of the state militia and did strike duty with his regiment at Lawrence in 1912.

He was born in Rockland, Mass., about 1889, the son of George H. Hunt. He entered the Academy in September 1906, being registered with the second year class, and remained here two years. For the last six years he has lived at Wollaston, Mass., and at the time of his enlistment was employed in the loan department of the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston. He was a member of the Wollaston Yacht Club; was also a Mason. A wife and two children survive him.

LIEUTENANT ERROL D. MARSH, '09

Lieut. Errol Dwight Marsh, 319th Infantry, was killed in action Nov. 2, 1918, in France. The first word to his father was sent by a brother officer who found the body as the Americans were advancing against the German lines in the last great battle of the war and who wrote this hurried word; "I came across your son early Nov. 2. Being on the same mission for which he gave his life, every second counted. Noting his being an officer, I looked for identification for military reasons. I merely looked in his kit bag and these three pages in a note book caught my eye. One of them demands that I send them back to the transport for mailing, as I am going on and might not get another chance." One page of the note book contained Lieut. Marsh's full home address.

This letter from the battlefield came to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Marsh, Westboro, Mass., in the afternoon, and was followed in the evening by the receipt of a letter from their son written some days before his death and telling of his transfer from the 302nd infantry to the 319th, and stating that he was in charge of 800 men similarly transferred. The official notification of his death came some time later.

He was born in Ware, Mass. July 19, 1889. He attended the schools of Westboro, whither his parents had removed, and after graduating from the high school and a short term of study at Andover, he entered the Academy in the fall of 1907 as a day student. He remained here two years, and then entered Dartmouth college. After three years there he returned to Westboro, and entered business with his father in the manufacture of trellises and plant sticks. For awhile he was connected with Willett, Sears & Co., wholesalers of Boston.

Following the nation's declaration of war he went to Plattsburg and received his commission as 2nd Lieutenant at the conclusion of the first period of instruction. With the formation of the 76th Division, he was summoned to active duty at Camp Devens. His division went overseas on July 4, last, and had been engaged at the front constantly after that time.

He was married August 23, 1917 to Miss Jane Nason, daughter of Mrs. John S. Nason of Westboro. The wife was in Florida with her mother at the time of Lieut. Marsh's death and the news was telegraphed her there. His letters home have been full of expressions of affection to his family and of devotion to the military service. Mr. Aldrich met him in Hanover shortly after his marriage,and will long remember thesplendid appearance which he presented in his lieutenant's uniform.

CORPORAL HAROLD L. DUTTON, '10

Corp. Harold Laforest Dutton died Nov. 23, 1918, of wounds received in the Argonne Forest Oct. 13 previous. Notice of his death did not reach his family until Dec. 16. They had not received a letter from him since Oct. 1, and early in December word was received that he was missing in action. This was followed the next day by a telegram that he was restored to his regiment. At last reports no details as to the nature of his wounds had been received, and the family have been at a loss to understand the conflicting statements and also why they received no word of any kind from Oct. 13 until Dec. It is believed however that he was wounded and taken prisoner and probably found in a German prison hospital after the armistice was signed.

He was born about 1890, the son of Henry H. Dutton. He entered Worcester Academy in the fall of 1908, registering in the second-year class. He remained here two years. He was prominent in athletics, particularly in football and in the weight events. He was also elected Manager of the track team for his last year. He was a member of the Legomathenian Society.

After two years at the Academy he entered the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, being there a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. After receiving his diploma there he returned to Portsmouth N. H., his former home, and associated himself with his father in the wholesale butter and egg business, and soon became one of the best known young business men of the city. At the beginning of the war he twice offered his services but was rejected for physical reasons. Later he was drafted and finally accepted, and went to Camp Devens Mar. 29, 1918. He was there only eighteen days, and later was transferred to Camp Dix. He soon was sent overseas as Corporal in Company F. 325th Infantry, 82nd Division, and received three months' training in France. Active fighting for him came in June, and he was in the big St. Mihiel salient and later in the Argonne.

He was married March 14, 1918, just before going to Camp Devens, to Miss Alice Gifford. The first word of his death came to the Academy in a letter from her acknowledging the school's New Year's greeting, in which she says; "I write you because I know you will want to know how bravely another of your boys has sacrificed his all and left so many of us lonely for him." The pathos of his death will come home all the more closely to his many W.A.friends on account of the doubt as to the circumstances of his last days as well as the way in which his death became known to his old school.

NOTE. Full details of his death, received too late for this issue, will appear in the next BULLETIN.

SERGEANT PAUL H. KNOWLES, '13

Sergt. Paul Hawthorne Knowles died November 15, 1918, from pneumonia, in the Mars Military Hospital in France. He was buried with full military honors in the Military Cemetery in that place. His older brother Carroll was with him at the last.

He volunteered in May, 1917, for service in an Officers' Training Camp, but was rejected on account on being underweight and because of a defective heart. In September, 1917, however, he was drafted, and at that time accepted, being assigned to Company A, 314th Field Signal Battalion, 89th Division. In May, 1918, he was appointed to attend an Officers' Training Camp, but the order was cancelled and he was immediately detailed to oversea duty. After two months in training in France, he was made a Corporal. About this time his division was sent to the front, taking part in the operations at Chateau Thierry, Soissons, St. Mihiel, Verdun, and the Argonne Forest. In this period he was made a Sergeant-Major. He was wounded November 5, in the closing days of the battle in the Argonne Forest, and died ten days later, the wound apparently developing into pneumonia.

Lieut. Errol D. Marsh, '09

Corp. Harold L. Dutton, '10

Sergt. Paul H Knowles, '13

Corp. Elston A. Day, '15

He was born October 23, 1894, and thus was 24 years of age at the time of his death. He entered the Academy together with his older brother, Carroll W. Knowles, '11, in the fall of 1907, and was here for four years, being registered when he left in June, 1911 with the second year class. He was very prominent in the athletics and the other activities of the younger boys of the school. After leaving Worcester, he completed his preparation for college in high school and entered Hamilton College in 1915. He is survived beside his brother, Carroll, by his mother, Mrs. Katheryn Solari of 205 West 89th St., New York City, and by a younger brother, Robert L., who has been in the Navy on the U. S. Super-dreadnought Florida, in foreign service under Admiral Sir David Beatty, and who has just returned with hearing much impaired from his service.

CORPORAL ELSTON A. DAY, '15

Corp. Elston Almond Day died Sept. 26, 1918, during the influenza epidemic at Camp Devens. He was an alumnus of the class of 1915. He entered in September, 1913, and soon was well known because of his high scholarship and good-natured willingness to help others. Among other things, he was a football man, a member of Agora, and in his senior year, a monitor.

The fall following his graduation, Elston went to the Massachusetts Agricultural College, where he joined Beta Kappa Phi fraternity. One year was the length of his stay in college, for in June, 1916, he left to go into the business of contractor's supplies with his father. About two years later, he married Miss Abbie Adams, of Northbridge.

Although rejected on account of his eyes, Day tried twice to enlist before going to Camp Devens on July 24, scarcely a month after his marriage. There he passed the highest psychological government examination, and became a corporal, serving as clerk to A Co. of the 74th Inf., when he succumbed to an attack of pneumonia following influenza.

Day is buried in Princeton, Maine, in which town he was born, December 26, 1893. Although attending primary school there, it was in Waterville that he went to grammar school. At the end of this time he left Waterville, and in Northbridge, Mass., graduated from high school before entering Worcester Academy, where he remained two years.

A. H. Welch, '15.

SERGEANT ANDREW J. PROVOST, '16

Sergt. Andrew Jay Provost, 3d, '16, died Nov. 7, 1918, from wounds received in action Nov. 1. His regiment had been in action on the St. Mihiel front from Sept. 12 to Oct. 4, and in the Argonne Forest from Oct. 12 to the end of hostilities. From a companion wounded the same day, Provost's father has received information that makes it appear almost certain that Andrew fell in the Bois de Loge a few miles north of Grand Pre, which town his division had captured and held a few days before, after it had been taken and retaken several times.

He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., Mar. 20, 1894, but his home since early childhood was in Richmond Hill, N. Y., where he attended the public schools until he entered the Manual Training High School in Brooklyn. For an intermediate period before entering Worcester Academy he was in the employ of the city, and worked with the engineering force on the construction of a portion of the Catskill Aqueduct. This contact with trained technical men awakened in him the desire to resume his studies. Accordingly he entered Worcester Academy in January, 1913, as a member of the second year class, and remained until June, 1914. His interest in school activities increased gradually and before he left he was looked upon as a leader in the school. He was a member of the Legomathenian Society. A younger brother, Balston, was a student at the Academy 1916-18.

Upon leaving the Academy it was his purpose to master the practical and technical details of the manufacture of woolen goods, and with this end in view he entered the Amoskeag Mills at Manchester, N. H. He proved very efficient in problems connected with complicated high speed machinery. During his last year at Manchester his work attracted the attention of other mills, and before he entered the army he received very flattering offers which he declined, for his mind at that time was fully absorbed with the hope of entering the aviation service. He entered upon training in this service and soon qualified, and was promised an assignment which would lead to a commission. Before he was asked to report, however, he was in active service with the British Reserves in France, and his transfer could not be arranged. Although this was a keen disappointment, his letters show that he liked the infantry and was proud of the two promotions which he received. One of his last letters home said that he was out for higher rank. This ambition was fulfilled, as the U. S. War Department has officially listed him as sergeant, a promotion that had been recommended when he wrote his last letter only three days before he was wounded. This communication from the U. S. Army authorities as well as the sector in which he was last fighting shows that he had been transferred from the British Army to an American division. The action on Nov. 1, in which he met his death, was the final decisive operation, and only a nominal resistance thereafter was encountered in the advance of the Americans to Sedan.

Sergt. Provost's father speaks repeatedly in his letter to us of Andrew's deep loyalty and affection to Worcester Academy, its traditions, its masters, and its students. He says: "Coming to it without proper preliminary training in application and school discipline he soon became conscious of the spirit that prevailed, and counted the days spent there among the happiest and most useful of his life, After he left it, in the workroom and on the battlefield, I am sure he carried the Academy's banner in his heart."

D. EMORY HOLMAN, '17

David Emory Holman died Oct. 9, 1918, of pneumonia following influenza. He had enlisted the March previous as second class seaman, in the Naval Reserve at Newport, R. I., and was at the Naval Station at Newport through the summer. About the middle of September he was seized with the influenza, and at the end of a week developed pneumonia, being very ill from the first. His mother and sister were with him for the last two weeks before the end came. The funeral services were held at his home, 39 Pleasant Street, Attleboro, Mass.

Emory was born November 15, 1896, being the second son of Samuel M. Holman of Attleboro. He attended the local schools of that town, and was graduated from the High School in the class of 1916. While there he gained a reputation as an athlete, being proficient in all four major sports, but particularly skilful in basketball, and was captain of the team during the season of his senior year.

He entered Worcester Academy in the fall of 1916, having it in his mind at that time to prepare for Brown University. He entered into athletics here also and received his W in football. The following summer he was at the White Mountain Camps at Tamworth, New Hampshire. When fall came he entered the employment of the Lewis Manufacturing Company of Walpole, Mass., makers of hospital supplies, and remained with them until March when he enlisted. While at Walpole, he coached the basketball team of the high school.

After being at Newport about three months and serving as orderly detail at the Second Naval District Receiving Barracks, he made an application for transfer to aviation, and in this purpose he wrote Dr. Abercrombie under date of June 13: "I have been stationed at Newport for the past three months, enlisted as a seaman, and have decided that I can serve my country better in the capacity of a pilot in Naval Aviation. In order to enter this branch of the service, it is necessary to have three letters of recommendation in regard to the applicant's character, and I know of no recommendation that I would value so highly as I would one from you."

Besides his parents he is survived by a sister and a brother. The estimate that he won from his associates, both in school and in his short life afterward, is well summed up in the following words written his mother by a Y. M. C. A. secretary in charge at the Naval Station at Newport: "May I say that there was no one in camp better liked by all men who knew him, a splendid man with a big heart. He has given his all for his country as much as any who have fought, for he has borne the hardships of an exacting camp life and its tedious routine, far from the excitement and exhilaration of active warfare, with unceasing effort."

LEWIS A. YOUNG, '17

Lewis Armstrong Young, machinist's mate on the U. S. S. Marietta, died of influenza Oct. 15, 1918, while his ship was in port at Bordeaux. He had been ill only about a week, but grew steadily worse from the beginning. The best medical aid was available but it proved impossible to stay the progress of the disease. His burial was military, and the body was accompanied to the grave by the full ship's crew, as well as over one hundred Masons from the shore station.

His service began on July 26, 1917, when he enlisted in the Naval Reserve as machinist's mate, second class, and was assigned to the receiving ship at Commonwealth Pier. He was there a week and then left rather unexpectedly for the Brooklyn Navy Yard to join the U. S. S. Marietta and to go overseas. This unexpected transfer gave him no chance to go to his home in Provincetown to say goodbye. He did see his brother, Arthur J. Young, '16, in Boston, and his mother and his fiancée, Miss F. Louise Waldin of Provincetown, went to New York and were with him for two or three evenings. Lewis then left for Newport and then for overseas, being heard from about two months afterward at the Azores. His ship was on duty largely in the Mediterranean, touching at Gibraltar and various other ports. In a log which he kept and which is now a highly prized possession of his mother, he speaks of submarine attacks and of the possible sinking of one by his ship. Later the ship was ordered to a port on the west coast of France, where it was stationed when his death occurred. He had been made acting Chief Machinist, and was soon to have received definite promotion to that rank.

While at Commonwealth Pier Lewis and a fellow Mason became very much attached and they hoped to be assigned to the same ship. This desire however was not granted, but the transport Covington, on which his friend had been placed, was sunk off France, and his friend, who was rescued, found him again and they later were together on the Marietta as they had at first hoped. This friend was with him during his illness, and stood watch with him the night before his death.

Lewis Young was born Feb. 8, 1896, the son of William H. Young of 12 Carver Street, Provincetown, Mass. He was at the Academy in the fall of 1914, his brother Arthur J. Young, '16, entering at the same time. After leaving the Academy, and after attending Cushing for some time, he entered the Wentworth Institute, where he finished his course as an accomplished machinist. In the fall of the next year he took a course in ignition at the Y. M. C. A. Northeastern School. That summer he operated a garage for Dr. C. P. Curley in Provincetown, and the next fall took a position with the Chandler Automobile Company for which he worked until the time of his enlistment. His efficient work with them opened to him excellent prospects for business advancement, but he laid it all aside when he felt he should join the forces of his country.

TRUEMAN E. KILE, '18

Trueman Eugene Kile died December 6, 1918. He was a member of the S. A. T. C. at the Massachusetts State College, Amherst, Mass. He was born April 19, 1898, the son of B. E. Kile of 295 Olney Street, Providence, R. I. He came to the Academy from the Hope Street High School of Providence, entering our Junior class and remaining here during the school year 1916-'17.

CORPORAL VINCENT W. MARSHALL, '18

Corp. Vincent Wilson Marshall died of influenza-pneumonia, Oct. 15, 1918, at Ann Arbor, Mich. He entered the University of Michigan in September, being enrolled in the S. A. T. C. While here he was seized by the prevailing epidemic. His father and mother were summoned from Chicago the morning of his death, and reached Ann Arbor at six P. M., only to find that he had passed away two hours before.

He was born Mar. 22, 1899, the son of J. B. Marshall, now of 1040 Elmwood Ave., Wilmette, Chicago, Ill. He was a pupil at the Asheville School for the two years 1914–16, and entered Worcester Academy in the fall of 1916, becoming a member of the junior class. He was elected a member of the Sigma Zeta Kappa society, and interested himself in various lines of school activity. He was prominent in soccer, winning his letter both years of his stay here. He received his diploma in June, in the scientific course, and was then intending to enter Cornell, but changed his plans during the summer. He was popular with his fellow students at Worcester, and was looked upon as a boy of much promise. The news of his death will come with great sorrow, especially to the members of his class, in whose ranks his death makes a vacant place in so few short weeks after the good-bye last June. The accompanying photograph is from the class picture.

In the few weeks that he had been at the Univ. of Michigan he had become much interested in his work, and was ambitious to obtain an officer's commission. He had already been elected corporal.

LIEUTENANT CLIFFORD G. PARK, '19

Lieut. Clifford George Park died in France sometime in October from pneumonia. As soon as the United States entered the war he felt a desire to enter service and did not return to the school in the fall of 1917. He enlisted in the aviation corps and was sent to the training camp at Mount Clemens, Mich. After completing the course here he was sent to Mineola, N. Y. He sailed for France in Aug. 1918, and was in active service until seized by the epidemic.

He was born July 10, 1917, and thus was barely twenty-one at the time of his death. His father was George Park of Dexter, Me., manager of the Dumbarton Mills of that town, the family coming there from Connecticut about fifteen years ago. Following his attendance at the local schools Clifford entered Worcester Academy in the fall of 1914, joining the first year class. He had been at the Academy three consecutive years when he withdrew to enter the service. He was active in the work of the school's Young Men's Christian Association, and was always eager to lend his hand to any good cause.

Letters received from him by his parents since his arrival overseas were filled with good cheer, and show him to be full of courage and eager to do his full share for his country in the air. He had already established among his fellow flyers a reputation for skill and bravery. He had found in this branch of service the way in which he could be of great use to his country, and his name will remain in the annals of the Academy as that of a manly boy who was always ready to do his duty.

W. A. Men in Service, by Classes

The following lists continue similar lists that have appeared in the last three issues of the BULLETIN. The names of all former students of the Academy known to have been in service are included. The names of those concerning whom no word has been received directly or indirectly since the last issue are given at the end of the several classes. Nearly two hundred names have been added in response to letters of inquiry sent to former students who, leaving the school before the senior year, had not been on our Alumni list.

A considerable part of the information in these classes will no doubt be out of date by the time this issue reaches its readers. This is particularly true in regard to discharges from service and returns from abroad. Some of the statements therefore will have to be interpreted as applying to a date some weeks back, rather than to the present moment. Much effort nevertheless has been taken to get the latest facts, and only in few cases have we based our statements on material reaching us earlier than December.

Dr. Edwin G. Dexter, whose entrance into Red Cross service was reported in the June BULLETIN, has now been for some time Chief of the Bureau of War Orphans of the American Red Cross, and as such has a record family of some 40,000 orphans. He says they are a very delightful little bunch. Recently a new task has been assigned him, namely that of organizing and directing the American Red Cross expedition to Montenegro. A ship from Marseilles is to be at his disposal. He expects to take with him more than 750 tons of food and clothing; 20 automobiles and trucks to aid in transportation; three hospital units equipped with nurses and doctors; and a sufficient clerical personnel to run the expedition. The unit will be stationed at Pogoritza, Montenegro, and will remain in the country at least six months. Doctor Dexter expected to spend Christmas in Paris with his son, Capt. Henry V. Dexter, '14.

Robert M. Brown was appointed in Oct. by the U. S. Government on a war emergency board to investigate the oil and gas production of the country. The general nature of the work was the plotting of curves of the flow of oil wells and oil pockets and the pressures of gas bearing rocks, with a view of determining the future supply. He was sent to Pittsburgh, Pa., with the possibility of working later in the adjacent oil districts of West Virginia and Ohio.

Since his arrival he has not only supervised the work among colored troops, but in view of 33 years of close contact with men and boys he has had all questions concerning colored soldiers referred to him. Before the armistice was signed the Y. M. C. A. asked for an extension of his leave for the duration of the war and six months thereafter, which request was granted. His headquarters are at 12 Rue d'Aguesseau, Paris.

The circumstances are described as follows: Immediately upon hearing the cry, "man overboard," Lieut. Shirk dived from the promenade deck of the Lorraine, a distance of thirty feet, and supported the soldier who had been stunned by his fall into the water. A swift tide was running which carried both men a third of a mile from the Lorraine by the time a lifeboat from the vessel reached them. Dur-

Ex-faculty

Prof. Herbert D. Foster, now head of the Department of History at Dartmouth College, sailed Feb. 3 for France to engage in army Y. M. C. A. work. He will have his permanent headquarters in Paris, and will have charge of all the history work in connection with the regular courses of instruction which the Association is planning for the soldiers while they are waiting to be sent home. He plans to remain in this work as long as there is need. During the past summer he lectured regularly to the Dartmouth Training Unit on the aims of the war, and also had charge of the history work given to the Dartmouth S. A. T. C. this past fall.

Dr. Paul E. Sabine's address in Washington, D. C. is 1010 No. Carolina Ave. Since June 3, 1918, he has been engaged in experimental work in naval aircraft.

George S. Dole, an Ensign, has been in command of one of the submarine chasers operating in European waters. He was mentioned in November for promotion for efficient service.

Donald B. MacMillan volunteered his services some time ago for Naval Aviation work and was called to the Naval Training Station at Chicago. He is now back at his work writing and lecturing.

Lieut. Guerdon N. Messer, who resigned his position as Physical Director of Worcester Academy two years ago in order to enter the service of New York as Assistant Supervisor on the Military Training Commission, only to be drafted within a few months into the army at Camp Devens, was transferred early in November from Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., to Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio, to serve as Director of Physical Training and Athletics at the latter camp. Mr. Messer, after securing his officer's commission at Camp Devens, was sent to Camp Gordon, where his ability as an organizer and director of athletics very quickly manifested itself. He was given a warm welcome at Camp Sherman last November, whither his reputation had preceded him. Hardly had he completed the organization of the athletics at the latter camp, however, when the signing of the armistice resulted in a rapid mustering out of the 95th division there, including Lieut. Messer himself. He is now back in his former position at Albany, N. Y.

Charles Jones, who resigned his instructorship in Greek and Latin last June in order to enter the service of the Y.M.C.A. in France, was assigned to duty with an organization known as the Foyer du Soldat, whose purpose is the training of young French officers in American sports. This work is carried on at the Ecole Normale Militaire de Gymnastique, situated at Joinville-le-Pont, department of the Seine, about ten miles from Paris. In spite of the armistice the work is still going on, about three hundred officers being instructed at one time, these in turn making way for another similar group. After the completion of the course these officers become instructors in physical training and sports at various French army centers. Mr. Jones is known simply as the Instructeur Americain. A still later word from him states that he has been sent to Algiers for similar service.

Charles W. Bradlee, Jr., instructor in Manual Training until a year ago, has been serving for nearly a year as a Y. M. C. A. secretary in France. Since the signing of the armistice he has let it be known that his work has all been carried on in the vicinity of Rheims, thus affording him the opportunity of getting into the thick of the fighting. During his hazardous labors he has been twice wounded, both times in the face. As a result of the second wound he will probably carry a piece of German shrapnel in his head for the rest of his life. Now that demobilization is taking place he expects soon to be given his discharge. At present he is undecided as to whether to return to the United States, or to remain in France and engage in reconstruction work.

John W. Forrest, Instructor in Science from 1916 to 1918, was drafted into the army and sent to Camp Upton, Yaphank, Long Island, just as school opened in September. After seven weeks at that camp, during which he experienced an attack of influenza, he was transferred to Delhi, N. Y., to serve as clerk to the local draft board. His assignment to that particular locality was doubtless made because it placed him in close proximity to many relatives and friends. In December he was sent back to Camp Upton, and there mustered out shortly after Jan. 1.

William L. Langer enlisted in the 23d Eng. last winter. He was finally called to Co. E of the 30th Eng. and assigned to the 1st Gas Regt. Went across in June, then having the rank of Sergt. A letter from him in August states that he was about to go to the front. His home address is 16 Carver Street, Cambridge, Mass. Is now (March 1) back home, and will resume his work at Harvard.

Percival M. Symonds, who served as an Instructor in Mathematics last year, has been recently engaged in the Ordnance Proving Service at Camp Aberdeen, Maryland. His work has consisted of the drawing up of mathematical tables, based upon actual firing tests, by which the range-finding for the various classes of artillery could afterward be controlled. More recently he has been mustered out of the United States service, and has accepted a position in the statistical department of the John Hancock Life Insurance Co. at Boston.

Major Frank W. Cavanaugh, our former well-known football coach, has been in a French hospital recovering from shrapnel wounds received in action, which badly disfigured his face. When Cavanaugh went overseas with the 102nd Field Art. he held a lieutenant's commission; shortly after the 26th Division arrived in France he was promoted to a captaincy. After the fighting at Chateau Thierry last August, he served as Acting Major until late October when he was wounded. About the time the armistice was declared he received his Major's commission.

NEWS OF THE ALUMNI

ATTENTION

Each and every reader of The Bulletin is earnestly asked to co=operate in making this department complete and interesting. Your part is to keep us informed, primarily concerning yourself, and incidentally concerning others. You are interested in getting news about the other fellow; he feels the same about you. A certain number of facts reach us through personal visits of old fellows to the school, through casual correspondence that comes to the school office, and through the daily and college press. For the greater part, however, we must rely upon direct word from the individual alumnus.

To tempt you to give us this co=operation we are enclosing a loose slip in this issue. Will not each one return it with some news? We want business changes, new addresses, offices, and honors, vital statistics, and the various other items that interest you in the case of the other fellow. Give definite names, dates, etc., when possible. Newspaper clippings are especially helpful. Give us a hint, if that is all you have, and we will follow it up. The slip enclosed is adapted on one side for those in war service; on the reverse, for the civilian.

1863 Mrs. C. C. Cable of 862 Eustis St., St. Paul, Minn., called at the Academy the past summer to see the present location of the school attended by her father, the late William H. Cheney, who was at Worcester Academy, 1862–63, coming here from Hart, Mich.

1864 William L. Eddy of Girard, Kansas, is one of the comparatively small number of Academy men of the sixties whose names have been on our mailing list. We were happy to receive recently the following message of response from him addressed to the present students of the school. "I don't know as this will interest anyone, except perhaps because of ancient date. The school when I attended was at the corner of Belmont and Summer Streets. When the school closed in Feb., 1864, I enlisted in the 25th Mass. Reg. Vol., was wounded severely near Petersburg, Va., and was discharged in Philadelphia, Sept. 25, 1865. Two years later, Oct., 1867, I took Horace Greeley's advice, 'Go west, young man, and grow up with the country.' My train came to a stop at Lawrence, Kansas, I got off, took the stage 125 miles southeast, bought land in what was then known as the Cherokee strip, very well watered and very fertile, with very few settlers. Indians and buffalo were just moving back westward. I went into the cattle business and have handled cattle more or less ever since. It was hard sledding the first few years, but I took a partner in the form of a little Kansas school-marm. Since then times have been better. We have a family, three sons and one daughter, all doing well. Three live in the state, and one son is a superintendent of manual training in Detroit. Wife and I live on the old homestead first taken, one mile out from the city of Girard. Many thanks for the BULLETIN, and for the little booklet which I received."

1876 Rev. George H. Cummings of Thorndike, Mass., has four sons and one daughter. All the sons are in military service, three of them being Lieutenants.

1876 Hon. Webster Thayer, judge of the Superior Court of Massachusetts, who was ill for several months, is well again and has returned to active work on the bench. He has a son in the junior class at the Academy.

1886 Mrs. S W. Boardman (Nellie Thayer) writes Jan. 2, 1919: "You will remember Mr. Irving T. Boardman, my son, who called on you last summer and applied for a position as teacher. Soon after that he was called in the draft and sent to Camp Upton, Long Island, N. Y. While there he did considerable work at the Y. M. C. A. in connection with the chaplain and was in line for a promotion, but the epidemic was raging in the camp and proved fatal to him."

1887 Paul B. Morgan sailed in December on a business trip to Europe. He has been active in raising war funds in Worcester, and was also appointed to serve as one of the three advisors to work with the draft appeal board of Worcester.

1889 Rev. Edwin B. Dolan has left the pastorate of the First Baptist Church of Holyoke, Mass., after seven years of service, his resignation taking effect Sept. 30. The next day he became General Missionary to the Aided Churches of the Mass. Baptist State Convention. He has about 75 churches under his supervision and travels all over the state. As a sample of his migratory powers he writes, "Last night (Friday), I was in Williamstown, Sunday, I shall be in Wales, and the following Sunday in Nantucket." He is living at 21 Lebanon Street, Winchester, and his office is at 708 Ford Building, Boston. We hear that his parishioners at Holyoke were "so glad" to have him go that they gave him one hundred dollars in gold to speed him on his way.

1890 Albert E. Bailey's work as educational director at the First Baptist Church, Worcester, gave him the opportunity this Christmas to write a short pageant-drama called, "The Shattering of Thor." It was presented very effectively by his Bible School. The theme was the transformation of the heathen religion of the Northland into Christianity and the final destruction of the heathen spirit of war as typified in the overthrow of the Kaiser.

Bailey is giving a course of twenty lectures this winter at the Newton Theological Institute on Sunday School pedagogy; and he directs the Worcester Community School of Religion, besides teaching two courses in it each session.

1891 Mrs. Michael E. Fletcher of 109 Hutchison Street, Montreal, Canada, replies to a query concerning her sons, that the older, Durlin, who enlisted two weeks after the war was declared, leaving at the age of 18, his first year at Acadia University, served as a stretcher bearer until he was wounded, and then on recovery entered the Field Dressing Station and worked up to be in charge of the dispensary with his unit. He is now in Germany with the rank of Sergt. The younger son enlisted when he was 17 in the Inf., but was transferred at his late father's request to the Field Ambulance in order to be with his brother. Last Sept. he was wounded in the back, but not seriously, as he had on four German belts at the time. His mother expects them home in March, and hopes they will be able to return to school.

1892 Robert H. Fletcher is in the Lancaster Hospital, Brookline, Mass. He has had to give up all work but hopes later to get out again, but only after a long treatment.

1892 Rev. Frank A. Lombard is having this year his Sabbatical year from his work on the faculty of the Doshisha Univ., Kyoto, Japan. He is making his headquarters at The Grafton, Newton Center, Mass., spending some time in work in the libraries of Boston and vicinity. He visited the Academy in November.

1892 Cola W. Meacham is with Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago. His address is 3830 Adams St.

1893 The indulgence of the Class of 1893 is again asked for a further postponement of its quarter century statistics. The great amount of matter concerning military service had made it seem advisable to omit them. It is hoped that nothing will prevent their appearing in the March issue.

1893 Roland R. Cutler writes on Nov. 30 that he had been seriously ill with nervous indigestion, but was beginning to improve at the date of writing.

1893 Capt. Edwin P. Grosvenor was married Oct. 29, to Miss Thelma Cudlip of New York City, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Cudlip of Richmond, Va. The ceremony was performed at Wild Acres, Bethesda, Md., the country home of the groom's brother, Gilbert H. Grosvenor, '93. The bride was given in marriage by ex-president William H. Taft. Capt. Grosvenor is in the Military Intelligence Bureau in Washington.

1894 George C. Beals' address has been changed to Room 77, Equitable Bldg., Boston, Mass.

1894 Rev. Carleton A. Burgess was the preacher of the annual sermon at the meeting of the Boston South Assoc. of Baptist Churches held at Roxbury, Mass., Sept. 25. His theme was "Co-operation Necessary to Success in the Work of the Kingdom." Mr. Burgess was elected moderator of the Association for the coming year.

1896 Horace M. Hovey is now at the DeWitt Clinton High School, 59th St. and 10th Avenue, N. Y. City.

1899 Ralph Abercrombie was married Nov. 2 to Mrs. Elizabeth Giddings Johnson, widow of Tristam B. Johnson, '98. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's father, Prof. Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia University. Chaplain R. C. Knox of Columbia officiated. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Daniel W. Abercrombie, Jr., '05, and the bride by her little daughter, Elizabeth Alden Johnson, as flower girl. The couple are to live for the present at 202 West 74th Street, N. Y. City.

1899 Capt. Stanley B. Hall was married last May to Miss Anna Bristol of New York State. A few weeks after Capt. Hall left with his company for oversea service.

1899 Orville Barker Van Duser died May 2, in Rochester, N. Y. He was suddenly taken very ill with pneumonia complicated with peritonitis, while on a trip as traveling salesman in his work, and went directly to his brother's residence in Rochester where he died after a week's illness. The funeral services were held at the home of his aunt in Newark, N. Y., where formerly he had made his home for many years.

He was born in Newark, N. Y., in 1880, the second son of S. B. Van Duser. He was a cousin of Ralph E. Barker, '95 and Merle T. Barker, '99, and through their influence he entered W. A. in the fall of 1895. He remained here for three years, rooming in Davis Hall. He went into the dry goods business with his father at Newark, and continued this association for more than ten years. He then became connected with the Syracuse (N. Y.) Dry Goods Company, and represented them in the northern part of the state. For the past two years the family has lived in Liverpool, N. Y., near Syracuse. He was a member of the Official Board of the Methodist Church there, and was also a member of the Masonic fraternity and the Sons of Veterans.

He was married July 5, 1905, to Miss Louise Norris of Sodus, and she survives him with three children, Norris aged 10, Damon aged 8, and Ellen aged 6. He visited the Academy a few years ago for the first time since he was a pupil here, and was much interested in noting the changes that had taken place on the campus, and in recalling his old associates in the Main Building, to whom the news of his death will bring great sadness. The words that have come to us "all that a man should be," are what would be expected by those who knew the upright, manly, and cheery fellow here in the nineties.

1900 John Daniels resigned in Feb., 1918, as Director of the Children's Home Bureau of the Dept. of Public Charities in New York City. His address is 576 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

1900 Dana R. Pond, a student here 1987–98 in the second year class, has devoted himself to art, and has made a reputation for himself as a portrait painter. Army and of the Peace Commission, painted by him in Paris.

TOPICS OF THE YEAR

THE FALL'S ATHLETICS

At the opening of the Academy in September, there were high hopes of a splendid season in the regular fall sports despite the dampening effects of the war and the entrance of many of the older boys into the Students' Army Training Corps connected with various colleges. Training began at once and schedules were arranged, but before any of the games could be played off, the influenza had made its appearance in all parts of Massachusetts. As a result of this epidemic, restrictions in travelling ordered by the State Board of Health upset the plans for interscholastic contests. The football schedule especially suffered. Games arranged with the Huntington School and the Harvard Freshmen had to be given up, and contests with neighboring schools were substituted. Not until the first of November did the plague abate sufficiently to allow the final games of the schedule to be played according to the original arrangements. The Academy was fortunate in having the same coaches as during last year with the exception of Mr. Charles Jones, who is now engaged in war work in France. Mr. Hazelton and Mr. Delehanty were in charge of football, Mr. Johnstone of cross country, and Mr. Beazley of soccer.

A review of the season's sports follows:

Football

It was difficult for the fellows to keep up the daily grind of football practice on Gaskill Field for a month with no interscholastic contest to test their progress. The first game took place on October 19 against South High of Worcester. Springfield Y. M. C. A. College and Andover defeated the Academy, but these losses were forgotten in the final game of the season, the victory over Williston. Great credit is due to Captain H. Cousens, S. A. Vose, and L. Sullivan for their work during the season. Not only were these three players responsible for much of the success of the team, but they played with such sportsmanship that it would be hard to find a team with a cleaner record in this respect in the history of the school.

The following players received the "W": Milton E. Carroll, '19, New Bedford; Edwin A. Cole, Jr., '19, Housatonic; Harold F. Cousens, (Capt.) '21, Arlington; George A. Crawley, '21, Hartford, Ct.; Harlan Feuille, '19, Panama; William F. Hight, '22, Bangor, Me.; George R. Johnson (Mgr.), '19, Hartford, Ct.; Ebenezer B. King, '20, Peabody; John H. Lee, 2nd, '20, Brighton; Bernhard Simmons, '20, Worcester; Lawrence J. Sullivan, '20, New Bedford; Gordon S. Swift, '21, New Haven, Ct.; Latham C. Strong, '21, Haverhill; James E. Turner, '20, Smyrna, Del.; Stanley A. Vose, '21, Cumberland Hill, R. I.; Charles C. Wotton, '21, Rockland, Me.

The following games were played:

			W.A.	Opp.
Oct. 19	Worcester S. H. S.	home	53	0
Oct. 26	Springfield Y.M.C.A. Coll.	home	0	14
Nov. 2	Andover	away	0	24
Nov. 6	Wor. Trade School	home	56	0
Nov. 9	Cushing	away	21	0
Nov. 16	Williston	home	27	14

Soccer

During the first month of the fall term about twenty fellows answered the call of Capt. Hecht as candidates for the soccer team. Because of the absence of Mr. Jones, Mr. Beazley took charge of the coaching, assisted occasionally by Mr. Delahanty. The first two soccer games were defeats for the Academy, but at the beginning of November the effect of instruction in team work began to appear. Andover and Williston were both defeated, and by this latter victory the Academy won the New England preparatory school championship in soccer. Captain Hecht, Ferd. de la Macorra, and R. Sullivan did great work for Worcester throughout the season.

The following games were played:

			W.A.	Opp.
Oct. 20	Chinese Students of Boston	here	1	2
Nov. 2	Holyoke High	away	2	3
Nov. 9	Andover	away	2	1
Nov. 16	Springfield Y.M.C.A. Coll.	here	0	5
Nov. 20	Wilbraham	away	3	1

The letters in soccer were awarded to. Herbert H. Cooper, '22, Detroit, Mich.; Wyman F. Coudray, '19, Wethersfield, Ct.; Rodman O. Hazard, '22, Fairhaven, Vt.; Joseph de Martino, '20, Mexico City; Ferd. de la Macorra, '20, Mexico City; Octavio Hecht, (Capt.) '20, Guatemala; William O. Mannion, '21, Fall River; Walter B. Murdock, '19, Paia, T. H.; Gordon H. Smith, '19, Brookline; Robert V. Sullivan, '21, New Bedford; Lee F. Powers, '20, Allston; Ralph Spaulding, '20, Ardmore, Pa.; Silas E. Hamilton (Mgr.), '19, Dummerston, Vt.

Cross Country

The season in cross country was confined wholly to contests between the different classes of the school. Had the meets arranged for been run, it is probable that the Academy would have won distinction against Wakefield High, Wilbraham, Andover, and Williston. None of these meets took place, and the fellows had to content themselves with the annual cross country run, held Saturday, November 23. The first ten to finish were given class numerals. These were, in order: Hazard, '22, Ferd. de la Macorra, '20, Wetherbee, '22, Zegri, '20, Persons, '21, Armengol, '22, I. de Martino, '21, Roig, '20, Fran. de la Macorra, '21, Fraser, '20.

The account of this fall's athletics would not be complete without some reference to the trip made by Mr. Hazelton to Annapolis, where he saw the football game between the Navy and the Great Lakes Training School. It was in recognition of Mr. Hazelton's splendid work for the school during a season filled with anxiety and disappointment, and marred by cancelled games and sick players, that the student body and faculty sent him to Annapolis. W. H. F.
